Making Florida roadways safer for pedestrians and bicyclists has become a top issue of concern in transportation planning and management. A recent national 'Smart Growth' report particularly focused on pedestrian safety of Florida roadways.

Our featured speakers, both from the two counties' River to Sea Transportation Planning Organization (R2CTPO) have been working for several years on studies and solutions to both pedestrian and bicyclists safety – ranging from the pedestrian-heavy tourist stretches along A1A to roadways surrounding schools, and the planning of new developments and road improvements in order to facilitate pedestrian and bicycle safety on our roadways.
